Short synopsis:

Having been dumped by her boyfriend and rejected by her group of friends, Millie Vincent is visibly upset as she walks home from her night out.

On her way a boy asks can he walk with her, later a man offers to get her a taxi and then an off duty officer stops to check she is safe. They don't know each other but they share the same intention - except there are two sides to every story and Millie's version differs from theirs. She phones the police, but is it too late?

The Police endeavour to sift through the words of denial to establish what took place. They can't all be telling the truth, but they could all be lying.
