Short synopsis:

Alice and her baby girl squat in a damp, derelict room with her new friend Jade. Alice’s mother is a doctor, her father a policeman, her brother a mediator in the family’s acrimonious arena, her lover her biggest mistake?

Alice wants to be independent from her controlling parents but when her baby’s father Joey locates them Alice finds her emotions in turmoil, her instinct in conflict with common sense.

Life for Alice is thrown further in disarray with the arrival of Adam from Social Services, who offers her more than secure professional boundaries.

‘Anger is like water, it has to go somewhere’, Alice tells her mother – but where will Alice and her baby go?
